The Opal Range Best by Test

Because every woman that owns one recommends it to her neighbor, because it bakes evenly, is easily taken care of and is economical in its use of fuel. We know exactly how the range is built—what material goes into its construction—just what it will do—and the selling price is no more than you would ordinarily have to pay for the common kind. Has three-ply walls, reinforced flues, polished top, oven thermometer, patent sliding damper, plain nickel trimmings, sanitary leg base. A modern range built for the West. The size you want is here and at the price you want to pay, $35.00 to $55.00.

The Mission Heater

An All-Cast Heater for wood or coal is the most economical heater produced today. This new, Mission heater is made in several different styles, is beautifully nickeled, has extra large feed door to admit large chunks of wood. It is made entirely of cast iron, which will retain the heat hours after fuel has been consumed. It has a swing top, fire place front and high sanitary base and is the most economical heater ever offered at any price.

Trade in your old Heater and get a "Mission."

We will take it in and allow you all it is worth on the purchase of a new one.

Our old friend Wm. Snyder took a day off Saturday to visit Salem.
One often hears it said that the day of opportunity for the poor man getting a start is past. As evidence to the contrary we cite you to the case of W. A. Shelton, formerly of Oklahoma. Mr. Shelton had worked in town on a salary for years, and with a large family he found at the end of the month there was no surplus to lay by for a rainy day. The call of Oregon appealed to him. He disposed of his personal property and with his wife and six small children started for the state of opportunity, landing in Salem a year ago last May with only $35. He at once bought a 15-acre tract of stump and timber land on the installment plan. Before leaving Salem the $35 was invested in tools and provisions. The family lived in a tent until Mr. Shelton cut down trees and built a log house. Home-made furniture was hued out of the trees. There was enough open ground among the stumps to raise all the vegetables they needed the first season. They earned enough money picking berries and prunes to carry them through the winter. In the winter Mr. Shelton cut cord wood and cleared land. From the land he cleared he has sold $135 worth of beans and has several bushels left. They have also raised several hundred bushels of potatoes, a wagon load of squash; all kinds of garden truck for winter use, besides enough rough feed to winter a horse and cow. From the proceeds of the little farm and what the family earned picking fruit they have bought and paid for a horse, harness and wagon, cow and several shooks. They also have a nice start in thoroughbred poultry. The home made furniture has been replaced by something more up-to-date. They have a nice orchard started and nearly an acre of strawberries that will come into bearing next season. They expect to work into dairying and poultry raising. We refer to them as "they" for they are a family of workers, working in harmony and all doing their share from little three-year-old "Midge" to the oldest, a girl of 14. What the Sheltons have accomplished in Oregon, others can do if they are willing to work, make a few sacrifices of pleasure and comfort at first, have a stick-to-itiveness and a determination to win.

Dr. Hough Popular with Student Body

Instantaneously popular Dr. Lynn Harold Hough of the Garrett Biblical Institute is being listened to with great attention by the Willamette student body, both at the morning chapel hour and each evening, at 7:30 in Waller chapel.
"It is a responsible thing," said Dr. Hough this morning to be a young American, to be an American of character and high idealistic life. We are the empire builders whose very blood goes into the land to be paid for, not cast down but blood down. We need a new force into the real of the flag, a new white more radiant and a nobler royalty of perfect blue.
Dr. Hough also struck a popular key with the students when he said in regard to the 97 to 0 whitewash of Willamette at Eugene Saturday. "The test of a dead game sport is how he loses. The real temper of a people, team, and school is shown by the spirit when a team has lost." The long applause testified to the united fighting spirit of the student body despite the big defeat in the score.

PRISON BREAK FOILED BY MRS. CARRIE KERSCH

Tanner and Erwin Girl Plan Escape Which Fails by Close Margin

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Willard R. Tanner from the penitentiary September 29 was cleared up with a vengeance at about 5 o'clock yesterday morning, and the judgment of Superintendent Minto, who has contended that it was impossible for Tanner to have escaped from the institution, has been found good.
Yesterday morning Tanner, accompanied by Hazel Erwin, who was convicted with him for the murder of Roy Wallace in a Portland rooming house in 1912, entered the room in the woman's ward of the prison occupied by Nonnie Williams, who is doing time for complicity in a stabbing affray in Portland several months ago.
The Williams girl was bound and gagged almost before she was awake, and then the Erwin girl went to the room of Carrie Kersch, who is serving a term for manslaughter, and told her that the negro girl was sick and asked her to come and see what was the matter.

Without premonition of what was going on, Mrs. Kersch responded to the call, and as she entered the Erwin girl's room, where she had been told the negro girl was, she was seized by the throat by Tanner, who was hiding behind the door. Mrs. Kersch fought desperately—so desperately that the man was unable to choke her into submission or prevent her from getting away from him. Once out of his clutches, she ran to the window and called for help.

She was heard by the superintendent of the matron and the guards, who hurried to the scene. But when they arrived Tanner was nowhere to be seen. It was then discovered that a hole had been made through the brick wall between the woman's ward and the Bertillon room, and in the latter room Tanner was presently found stretched on the top of a large bookcase.

The attempted break was the final act in a carefully laid plot hatched up by Tanner and his partner, the Erwin girl, to escape from the prison. Superintendent Minto believes that had the plan been carried out successfully Matron Pope would have been overpowered and her keys taken away from her, after which Tanner and the Erwin girl would have let themselves into the grounds, from which they trusted to escape without further difficulty.

Tanner had in some manner obtained a suit of civilian's clothes, and to this extent the theory that assistance had been given him by some one of the visitors to the prison during fair week seems to have been correct. The Erwin girl was wearing clothing similar to that worn by the matron. It is generally believed at the prison that since his disappearance Tanner has been concealed in the Erwin girl's room, to which he had gained access by removing a four foot section of baseboard in the Bertillon room and tunneling through a 23 inch brick wall. Entrance to the Bertillon room was probably effected by means of a skeleton key, although no such key has been found.

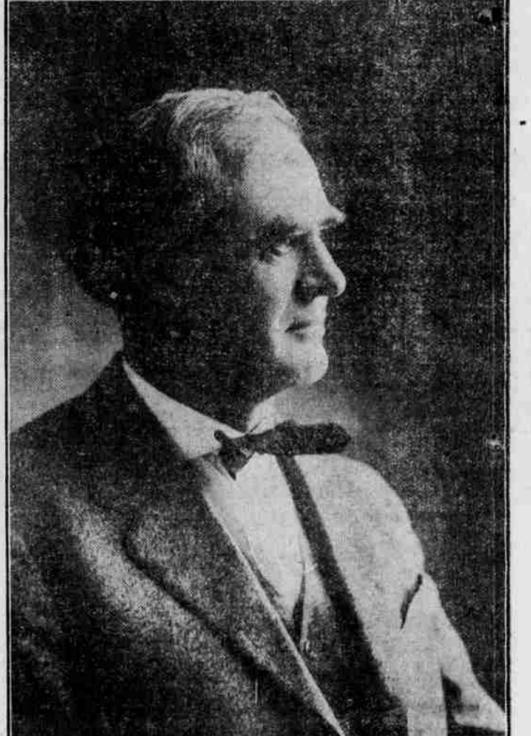

Tanner "Lost Since Fair"
The work of tunneling through the wall could not have been accomplished in less than a week's time. As fast as bricks were removed from the wall they were dropped down an unused chimney in the Bertillon room.
Tanner has planned other escapes, according to statements by the prison officials. At one time last fall while he was employed as an assistant to the prison photographer, he had been assigned a door leading to the roof was found, and it was at this time that Tanner was transferred from the photography department to the prison bakery, where he was working at the time of his disappearance September 29.

Both Tanner and the Erwin girl have been placed in solitary confinement. Mrs. Carrie Kersch, who gave the alarm and prevented the couple's escape, was recommended for a conditional pardon last month by the parole board and this recommendation is now under consideration by the governor. It is thought that this development may have some bearing on the granting of her application.

GRANT CORBY

Democratic Candidate for District Attorney for Marion County, Oregon

STATEMENT

Born in Clackamas county, Oregon; educated in pioneer home and public schools; graduated from college of Philomath; law department of Willamette university. Practiced law in this county 16 years. I have a well-equipped and up-to-date law office. I propose to give the taxpayers and general public value received. I am prepared. Much has been said in this and other campaigns about the suppression of graft. One of the main sources of graft is in competency of public officials. I recognize the absolute right of the majority to rule, and I will not hesitate, equivocate or falter in the suppression of that which the law prohibits, or in the enforcement of that which it commands. I believe a vigorous and efficient policy in this office will result in the elimination of a large proportion of our public expense.

Respectfully submitted,

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS
President American Society for Thrift

"He that despiseth little things," said King Solomon "shall perish by little and little." Pennies are little things, "How is it," said one man to another, "that you are able to feed and clothe your family as you do and put money in the bank, while I, with the same salary and a smaller family, can hardly make both ends meet?" "Because," answered the other man, "I look out for the pennies."

He worked so hard for his money he said that he could not bear to waste a cent of it. The saving of even the penny made him feel a free man—that if anything happened to him he would neither have to beg nor go to a charity institution.

Careful saving or thrift is one of the best habits to form. Perhaps the best because so many other good habits and good traits follow in its train. Once acquired it becomes a permanent trait. It gives such a feeling of security and independence. The pennies added to make dollars. A man may work ever so hard and receive a good salary, but unless he saves the pennies he will not get ahead. One dollar at 6 per cent compounded for fifty years makes $1842. We, as a nation, are money-makers, but not money savers. We must begin to save now. The thrifty worker is usually the efficient, reliable worker. The thrifty man has every chance in the world. His employer keeps him. Other employers desire him—the steady, thoughtful, wide-awake, industrious man, who thinks so much of his own future that he thinks also of the future of his firm. He is the man whose interests are one with those of his "house."

Thrift is always wholesome. Waste is always unnecessary and demoralizing. Frudence and moderation safeguard an individual and a nation.

The Danes are a wonderful thrifty people and some of their methods are as original as they are worthy of imitation. The Danish farmers tether their cattle in rows in such a way that they can cut but a certain section of grass in a day. Next day they are moved forward in the meadows and it is worked out in such a minute basis that by the time the cows have reached the end of the pasture the grass is again ready for grazing at the place where they began.

The Danes understand the conservation of their resources, and, like all thrifty peoples, have learned through system how to save.
